DARKLEAF

Mitchell, Tad Sears, A. R. Harwood, L. E. Smith, J. D. Morris, C. S. McDearmon, Jim Harvey, and J. H. Cheatham, Charlie Brown, H. M. Burge and dozens more now gone. Some day, my ghost will haunt its every foot. And I remember it with three feet of snow blanketing it, and how it was decorated on "Dedication Day." And the school parades, and the coming of Santa each year.

You can have your "big town," and the fabulous glamour streets of the world! This little one is mine, and for me! And I thought of all this, and then as I started on home I thought of a little poem the late Dr. D. A. Christian brought to me when he returned from the West, and that I, too, had found the same lines later at Rod's Steak House in Williams, Arizona. They seem to fit the mood of your editor, Christmas night, 1956:

"I like to live in a little town,
Where the trees meet across the street.
Where you wave your hand and say 'hello'
To everyone you meet.

"I like to stand for a moment
Outside the grocery store
And listen to the friendly gossip
Of the folks that live next door.

"For life is interwoven
With the friends we learn to know;
And we hear their joys and sorrows
As we daily come and go.

"And so I like to live in a little town,
I care no more to roam,
For every house in a little town
Is more than a house; It's a home."

Appomattox is a growing town.
